

the newspaper

The University of Toronto's Independent Paper Since 1978

home	the news	the arts	the opinion	the sports	the inside	f	twitter
----------------------	--------------------------	--------------------------	-----------------------------	----------------------------	----------------------------	-------------------	-------------------------

the arts

UTAC exhibit needs no silver lining

JAN 19, 2013 | BY SINEAD DOHERTY-GRANT

On Tuesday, January 15, the University of Toronto Art Center opened its doors to Luminescence: The Silver of Peru, an exhibit showcasing Peruvian works of art ranging from the beginning of the common era to the present. The four rooms in University College are filled with the iridescent shine of gilded silver, illuminating the colourful cultural history on display for all ages.

The silver pieces that predate the Spanish colonization were used as offerings to a favourite god, in ceremonial dances, and as symbols of wealth and status by the Inca, Chimú, and Nazca civilizations. The silver is eerily lovely in its immaculate perfection of tiny swirls and intricate patterns; all of these are preserved without injury or dullness.

By the 17th century the Christian influence visibly permeates the art, showcased in an oil painting of the Virgin Mary. This is lavishly engulfed in a thick, symmetrical frame of characteristic gilded silver. However, the Christian grandeur is eclipsed by the eighteenth and nineteenth century crowns also on display; these are embellished with colourful rhinestones in a show of stunning historical regalia, arguably the grandest artifacts in all four rooms.

For those interested in learning more about the cultural and political contexts, there are helpful descriptions throughout the gallery facilitating a deeper understanding of the pieces. Burial rituals, Inca Gods, and the decline of silver during the Pacific War are discussed in depth in the collection of over two thousand years of craft.

The collection of artifacts celebrates various historical stylistic preferences and a proud legacy of objects. It successfully showcases the precise, intricate artistry of Indigenous groups that continues to inspire awe. The ancient pieces are distanced from us by time and mystery but the beauty can be appreciated by all.

University of Toronto Art Center is located at University College, 15 King's College Circle. Luminescence: The Silver of Peru, runs until March 9.

RECENT STORIES

NXNE 2017
At least the apocalypse had good music.

Field Trip Festival 2017
"It feels like we're in Bellwoods, man."

Melodrama
the newspaper's review of Lorde's new album

Scott Helman talks Hôtel De Ville with the newspaper
Love, writing and the age-old Toronto vs

Feminism, Much Music and being Fearless as Possible
the newspaper interviewed Denise Denon on

Recommend

Share

Sort by Best

Start the discussion...

LOG IN WITH

OR SIGN UP WITH DISQUS ?

Name

Be the first to comment.

ALSO ON THE NEWSPAPER

Opinion: UTSU democracy advocates should look both ways

2 comments • 2 years ago

hackmorgenstern — pack your bags and leave

An era ends at the RSU as progressive Unite slate is defeated

2 comments • 2 years ago

ZM — I do my best :)

Johnnyland accused of being 'rape apologists'

6 comments • 2 years ago

Helen Fry — I am not supporting anyone. It's suspect when they publish a biased opinion neicie.

Why we need to discuss the politics of engineering

7 comments • 2 years ago

numbercrunch — r u a champagne socialist?

@THE_NEWSPAPER ON TWITTER

THE RECRUITMENT

WE NEED writers photographers illustrators

send samples of your work to: thenewspaper@gmail.com

