Nuit Blanche, Toronto's all night art expo, is just around the corner. As usual there's a bit of everything in the mix, from sound art to light art to dance, disco, performance art, all night film screenings and even some shopping.

This one night festival was originally created in Paris in 2002 in a bid to make contemporary art more accessible and inviting to the public. It has since popped up in major cities around the world to the delight of art aficionados, insomniacs, psychedelic enthusiasts, caffeine freaks and even those who are merely curious.

The event begins at 6:45 p.m. on October 2 and runs until dusk of the following day. Here is our guide to what you need to know to make the most of your night.

Transportation

Organizers have tried to make this year's edition easier to navigate by concentrating the main exhibition projects along the Yonge–University subway line, but with the independent projects
